Dear Commissioner Jane Henney,

A serious problem is in the making: using antibiotics to make chickens grow faster -- thereby weakening the reaction of people, especially children, when they are sick. Antibiotics should not be freely given to animals to make them ready for market faster. This is actually unconscionable.

I realize that stopping the use of these antibiotics for animals is politically controversial, but it really needs to be done.

Please do your part. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Mary B. Vant Hull
